

ORGANIZED MOVE ON PROHIBITION IS OPENED TODAY

Hearings on Proposals to Modify Law Open in Committee

Washington, April 5.—(AP)—The opponents of prohibition again marched on congress today in their first organized demonstration in several years.

At a hearing before a Senate subcommittee, the wet leaders marshaled a colorful array of arguments ranging from a demand for modification of the prohibition amendment itself to a petition for wine and beer.

Before a jammed and agitated committee room, Senator Bruce of Maryland, a democrat, began the attack with a brief in support of his constitutional amendment for a partial local option by states while Senator Lee of New Jersey, who has pending a wine and beer bill, was designated to second him. Julien Codman of Boston, was present as general counsel for the various groups of modificationists.

Senators Bruce and Edge both declared prohibition a failure and they and other witnesses laid on the committee table detailed compilations of statistics which they said proved the indictment.

Claim It's Time to Halt.

Both the senators said the time had come for action to alleviate wholesale violation of the law and an increasing spread of drinking, especially among the young.

The dramatic touches expected to give color to the hearings were lacking during the opening hours. Photographers took some preliminary shots at the outset, but thereafter they found nothing more thrilling to photograph than a group of quiet gentlemen, seated around a big table while one of their number read hurriedly through a prepared manuscript.

Senator Walsh of Montana, chief reliance of the dries in their cross questioning of wet witnesses, excused himself soon after Senator Bruce began his reading. It was the evident purpose of the prohibition managers to let the opposition to develop its case without interference for the time being.

The crowd in the committee room included many members of congress, a number of ministers and others who have interested themselves actively in the controversy on one side or the other. They listened intently but only on rare occasions were there any show of applause or any murmur of dissent.

Have Eye to Future.

Recognizing that they cannot hope to achieve liberalization of the act at this session, the wet leaders have set out with the primary purpose of getting their case formally before congress and the people with an eye to the future. The hearing technically were called for consideration of various bills before the committee but the committee but the whole field of prohibition as it has unfolded in the last six years comes within their scope.

A demand that congress at least amend the Volstead act so as to permit the sale of beverages non-intoxicating in fact was made today before the Senate Judiciary sub-committee by Julien Codman, counsel for the wets, at the opening of hearing.

"The time has come when Congress must consider, if it is to do its duty to the people," Mr. Codman said, "in what way it can best get out of the terrible mess into which this ill-considered legislation has plunged us. All over the country the cry for relief is heard and some concrete plan is demanded. With the Volstead law as a warning, it behooves us to proceed with caution to climb out of the legislative well into which we have been pushed."

Mr. Codman said he represented the joint legislative committee of the American Federation of Labor, the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, the Moderation League of New York and the Constitutional Liberty League of Massachusetts. He insisted on amendment of the Volstead act to permit sale of beverages non-intoxicating in fact as a matter of simple justice, declaring that this would give everyone the same rights as those now enjoyed by such individuals as can make wine and cider in their homes.

Debases Human Morals.

Prohibition has had no effect on the whole, except that of blighting human happiness, debasing human morals and discrediting human laws, Senator Bruce, democrat of Maryland, declared. He appeared in support of his constitutional amendment to permit government manufacture and sale of liquors in those states or subdivisions which were wet before the ratification of the 18th amendment.

"The Volstead act," he said, "has placed human happiness in more than one vital particular under irritating and harassing domination of a sour, corrosive and narrow-minded puritanism."

"It has for the first time brought the church deeply into politics."

"It has established a settled commerce between the worthy and the unworthy members of the community."

Many Disregard Law.
"It is responsible for the unprecedented phenomenon of thousands of reputable men and women living in habitual disregard of constitutional law."

"It has tended to bring all laws including itself, into more or less disrespect."

"It has fostered deceit, perjury,

SWIFT ACTION IS NEEDED TO PASS WATERWAYS BILL

House Committee Has Compromised After Bitter Battle

Washington, April 5.—(AP)—The house steering committee was called upon today to expedite consideration of a $35,000,000 waterways development program agreed upon Saturday by the rivers and harbors committee.

The agreement, embracing 31 projects, was reached only after an uninterrupted nine hour statistical and near fistie battle in the committee had threatened to continue a deadlock which would have made action on an omnibus rivers and harbors bill at this session of congress impossible.

The committee deferred final action on the two chief points of controversy before favoring compromise proposals for expenditure of $250,000 for a new survey of the proposed canal across New York state connecting the Great Lakes and the Atlantic ocean and $1,350,000 for navigation improvement of the Illinois river without touching on the question of water diversion from Lake Michigan.

Deep Water Outlets

Champions of these two projects, which contemplate deep waterway outlets from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico and Atlantic ocean, claimed victory for their respective sections, the republican party and nation as a whole on the basis of the committee's action. These proposals together with purchase of the Cape Cod canal and completion of the inter-coastal canal in Texas, also approved Saturday, would extend the coastwise shipping laws 3,000 miles inland.

Chairman Denney of the committee who contended for "the patriotic all-American deep waterway" survey over opposition directed at it as the all-New York barge canal, asserted that completion of the project would aid the farmers, give a sea outlet to the marooned midwest and minimize the national defense problem.

Representative William E. Hull, republican of Illinois, leader of the fight for Illinois river improvement, referred to the committee's action as providing for "the missing link" in a lakes to the gulf waterway for the farmer, and placing the midwest in a better position to compete with the east in a commercial way."

COMPANY WHICH SIGNED GRANGE IN MONEY MIRE

Receiver Appointed to Handle it; Grange Claims 'Safety'

New York, April 5.—(AP)—The Arrow Pictures Corporation, the company which signed Red Grange to appear in motion pictures after his sensational debut last year in professional football, was placed in the hands of equity receivers today on petition of Motion Pictures Today, Inc., a publication.

The receivership was consented to by the defendant corporation.

The petition sets forth the fact that the company is a Virginia corporation with a capital of $650,000, that it is at present unable to meet its obligations, but that it has assets exceeding $800,000 and has upon the market film productions from which a profit may be expected. The corporation was organized in September 1924.

The order appointing receivers directs them to continue the business for the benefit of creditors.

Signed in December. When Red Grange was here last December with the Chicago Bears, professional football team, his manager, C. C. Pyle, announced that the young star had signed a contract with the Arrow Corporation to appear in a motion picture and had received a check for $300,000 representing a flat guarantee for his first appearance on the screen.

R. F. Woodhull, president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America, termed as "nonsensical" the report that Grange was given $300,000. The Theater Owners Association, subsequently announced that Grange would not be allowed on the screens of their theaters, if the exhibitors found that the $300,000 contract was "bunk publicity."

In a letter to the managers of theaters in his organization, Woodhull later expressed dissatisfaction with an investigation into the Grange contract, saying he wanted to acquaint them "with the facts uncovered in this particular instance."

CAREER TO CONTINUE

Chicago, April 5.—(AP)—Red Grange is not going back to the ice wagon because the Arrow Pictures Corporation was placed in the hands of equity receivers today. On the other hand a further career on the football gridiron is assured and his advent into picture also was assured when the contract was signed.

C. C. Pyle, Red's manager said the "Galloping Ghost's" movie contract was not made with the Arrow Corporation, but directly with its president, W. F. Schallenberg, and the $300,000 to be paid Grange remains safely banked.

Grange will leave for the Pacific Coast within ten days for his movie work, said Pyle. Scenarists now are writing the story for his first picture under the contract.

The guests, who are chief backers of the expedition, include John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Vincent Astor, Edsel Ford and the explorer's brother Governor H. F. Byrd of Virginia.

Youths Convicted of Murder of Chicagoan

Springfield, Ill., April 5.—(AP)—John Parks, 19, and John Buskevich, 23, have been found guilty of murdering Edmund Hansen, Chicago furniture manufacturer and sentenced to prison. A jury which returned a verdict Sunday afternoon after receiving the case late Saturday, fixed Parks term at 20 years and that of Buskevich at 30 years. The slaying occurred during a holdup of a road house last October 20. Hansen, accompanied by his wife, had stopped there while on the way to Chicago from St. Louis and was shot when he went to the assistance of the proprietor.

BUT TWO WAYS TO REMEDY PRESENT HIGH SCHOOL SITUATION IN DIXON: COMBINING OF TWO CON- GRESSIONAL TOWNSHIPS IS MOST SATISFACTORY

In presenting a series of articles which contains information pertinent to the proposition of combining Congressional Townships Nos. 21 and 22 in a new high school district, which is to be voted on at an election to be held on Saturday, April 10th, the Board of Education of School District No. 170 is submitting this, the fourth, article on the "Ways of Correcting the Present High School Situation."

The other articles, which have been published, appeared in the Dixon Telegraph in its issues of Tuesday, March 30th, Friday, April 2nd, and Saturday, April 3rd.

In the article appearing Saturday, April 3rd, it was established that the present school buildings of District No. 170 are surely over-crowded with student attendance and that these buildings are likewise unsuitable for high school purposes as they are not of modern high school plan and are lacking in facilities necessary to provide high school education of required and desired standard.

There are but two ways of correcting this existing high school situation although there are three ways of overcoming only the over-crowded condition.

To provide more room would entail either the erection of a new high school building or a new grade school building. If a new grade school building would thus be vacated by grade school pupils would not serve the purpose of providing high school educational facilities necessary to maintain a high school of required standard and without the expenditure of a substantial fund in improvements and additional requirements. This necessary expenditure in improvement and remodeling together with the cost of a new grade school building would approximate the cost of a new high school building. However, the same building, if vacated by the high school students, would provide entirely suitable accommodations for grade school educational purposes. This means, then, that the provision of a new modern high school building is needed.

There is one of two ways of providing a new high school building. One of these ways will be to have such a building provided solely by District No. 170. The law permits the district, for building purposes, to levy taxes to the amount of 5 percent of the equalized valuation of the property within the district. Taxation is restricted to this five per cent. Five per cent of the equalized valuation of property in the district would provide $288,960. There are yet $13,000 of building bonds to be paid by District No. 170. The greatest amount possible which could be raised within District No. 170 and which could be used for new building purposes would therefore not exceed $275,960. This amount would not be sufficient to provide high school accommodations and facilities for students outside of District No. 170 and in order to meet the requirements of accredited high school standard, District No. 170 might be compelled to deny attendance of high school students who are from outside the district. Such restriction as to attendance is absolutely undesirable from any viewpoint. Besides, if such were to be the procedure, the tax levy against the equalized valuation of property within District No. 170 would necessarily amount to 5 per cent on every $100

PUBLISHED VIEWS OF DIXON WOMAN'S FARM

A recent issue of The Prairie Farmer, printed three fine pictures of the farm of Mrs. Ella M. Swarts & Sons, the views being of the driveway, the front yard and the house. Commenting on the views the publication says:

"Mrs. Swarts, a widow since 1918, planned and planted practically all the trees and shrubbery about their home since 1912. Their farm home northeast of Dixon, is one of the most attractive in Northern Illinois."

Two Aviators Killed in Fall at St. Louis

St. Louis, Mo., April 5.—(AP)—Two flyers are dead as the result of a Sunday airplane accident at Lambert St. Louis flying field at Bridgeton, a suburb. The victims were Lieut. Charles E. Smith, a native of Fulton, Ky., and Private J. Swengosh, St. Louis, of the 3rd division air service Missouri National Guard. Their plane fell 1500 feet when a wing crumpled while they were doing a "loop."

ANNIVERSARY OF WORST FIRE IN CITY'S HISTORY

Mills Burned 46 Years Ago Sunday Night; Two Killed

"Way Back When Kate Claxton, dramatist, was playing the leading role in "The Two Orphans," 46 years ago last night, at the old Dixon theater, this city experienced the worst fire in its history. Tim Sullivan this morning recalled the fact that 46 years ago last night, one of the dark pages of Dixon's history was written.

The Becker-Underwood flour mill, the Bennett-Uhl flour mill, the Finley McMartin woolen mill, Dement's bag mill, Baldwin's grist mill, Brown and Edwards machine shop and the city pumping station on East River street were totally destroyed by the worst fire in Dixon's history. Pat Duffy and William Hink are two survivors, who were blown off of the Becker-Underwood mill by an explosion, both of whom recall very clearly the events up to that time. Ezra Becker, one of the millers, and William Schumm, a drug clerk, were killed in the explosion. The flames could be seen for many miles, but that was a day before the telephone and it was not until the following day that many Dixonites knew of the location of the fire. The city pumping station, which was then located in the middle of the street about in front of the present I. N. U. company warehouse, was burned early in the evening, practically putting out of commission the fire fighting strength of the city. Amboy's fire department responded to a call for help and made a record run to Dixon and assisted in putting out the fire.

"Missing" Nurse is Held as Shoplifter

Chicago, April 5.—(AP)—Miss Elly Dellibac, 21, daughter of Dr. LeRoy Dellibac of Kankakee, Ill., dentist, reported missing from the Englewood Hospital in which she was a student nurse, is under arrest in a Chicago police station, Assistant Chief of Detectives Stoge announced today. He said the young woman, in connection with whose disappearance Dr. J. L. Bresler of Chicago was arrested, was taken in a downtown store on a charge of shoplifting.

Dr. Bresler was arrested on a minor charge and released on a small bond after the young woman's father found a number of letters the physician had written to Miss Dellibac. Dr. Bresler, a staff physician at the hospital, married and the father of a young daughter, insisted he could offer no explanation of Miss Dellibac's disappearance, but admitted that "the strain of love that runs through the letters comes right from the heart."

Later Miss Dellibac was placed upon one year's probation provided she would leave Chicago. Dr. Bresler, charged with disorderly conduct, gained a continuance to April 22.

Rheumatism Fatal To Polo Girl Sat- urday at Her Home

Louise Hedrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Hedrick of Polo and a niece of Mrs. William Ware of Dixon, died at the home of her parents at 6 o'clock Saturday evening, death resulting from rheumatism and complications. She suffered a first severe attack of rheumatism about Christmas but recovered to some extent and was able to return to her studies at the Polo high school, where she was a beloved pupil. Her last attack, which resulted fatally, occurred about three weeks ago. Funeral services were held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the Polo Lutheran church, Rev. Bair officiating and with burial in Fairmont. Louise who was born near Polo July 28, 1910, is survived by her parents, a sister, Pauline, and a brother Robert. A twin sister, Mary, and a brother, Ross Jr., preceded her in death.

Sickness and Snow; Clogged Roads Hurt Easter S. S. Figure

Fourteen of the fifteen Sunday Schools co-operating in the District Association reported a total Easter attendance yesterday, of 1816, which was considerably below that of a year ago, due to prevalent sickness, especially contagious affections among children, and the condition of many rural roads. The Sugar Grove school had no session at all. But there was nearly a fifty per cent increase over Palm Sunday, which evidenced a hope that the aim of 2500 would not have been an unreasonable one, had the situation been normal.

Sterling Sunday Schools had one of their greatest days, the total for the city alone surpassing that of the whole district, which has some half-dozen schools outside.

Respectfully submitted,
Board of Education,
School District No. 170.

was filled with boys taking advantage of the equipment there. In the swim-afternoon the whole time was taken with gym classes under proper where all these boys would have been were there no Y. M. C. A. in Dixon. The fact that the "Y" is doing a real service for the boys of this past year, when the building and its equipment was used by over 18,000 times by boys for gym classes, swimand service training.

built."

it will be remembered that each Pi-

The WOMAN'S DAY

By Allene Sumner

Garnish and Serve.

Now it's Mother and Daughter Week! Date set by different cities. Early in April in most of them. As a daughter, I arise to remark that I waver this brilliant idea was hatched by a mother and not a daughter. It's the very thing that modern daughters loathe and scorn and despise—this crystallization of sentiment into conventional organized patterns. Mothers will probably get up and prattle at these mother-daughter luncheons about "keeping our daughter's confidence," and all the usual bunk and the very prattle and the very meeting will push mothers and daughters so far apart that a ten-foot pole can't reach from one part to the other.

"Because of the incompetency of thousands of teachers in Ohio our educational system is becoming alarming," comments the state educational director.

I am not a teacher, but I know scores of them and can't resist making this wise-rack paraphrase of the estimable director.

"Because of the incompetency of parents the nation over, our education, a system is becoming alarming."

The average parent lets his child drink, pet, wear little or no clothing, dress on a small income like a banker's daughter, be out night after night of the week, demand and get its high standard of living—then sends it off to school for the teacher to make over into all that a child should be. "A teacher cannot teach any more," my teacher friend said to me, "we must be probation officers, etiquette authorities, moral advisers, and a vaudeville entertainer all the time."

"Something Different." Mayhap you good man gets tired of the eternal beefsteak and onions or pork chops. Ever try "ham supreme"? Two-pound piece of ham, cut thick, is scalded and placed flat on buttered baking pan. Place slices of canned pineapple around ham so that slices touch each other and are about one-half inch over edge of ham. Sprinkle all with brown sugar, add two-thirds cup of pineapple juice, bake 35 minutes, serve as cooked.

BY CYNTHIA GREY—Most of our wide-awake modern girls are demanding to be shown. They refuse to swallow some of the old lines that were handed the old-fashioned girl.

Especially do they demand some REAL answers, some satisfying, sensible answers to that old question, "Does it pay a girl to be decent?" Every mail I find a letter something like this upon my desk: "Dear Cynthia Grey: 'Is there any earthly reason why a girl should be decent nowadays? Does the world give anything to modesty and reserve in a girl? I'm about fed up on being told that men play around with the other kind of girls, but don't marry them. They do, every time!'

"Besides, I want some fun before I'm too old to enjoy it! Even the prospect of a possible husband who may come wandering around after he's gotten sort of seedy from too many gay times with other girls doesn't thrill me much. I want some fun myself while I'm young!" "And you know perfectly well, Cynthia Grey, that unless a girl gets and makes a fool of herself and is wild and has that come-hither shake in her walk, she does NOT have dates!"

No Dates. "Haven't girls like myself who get left in the lurch a right to begin sowing our wild oats and cut loose?" This girl does shout out truth loudly that I want to shout with her. And that is that this talk about a man leaving the wild girls long enough to marry an un-wild girl, is the bunk.

And any demure little maiden who consoles herself with the thought that some day she'll have a husband while the butterfly with her scorched wings will be a faded, broken, worn-out woman with empty heart and arms, better get another idea in her head.

Such an idea is the bunk. Marriage results from propinquity, association, companionship, and the man who plays about with a giddy, wild girl is going to marry her, or one like her, too.

What About It? Well, what about it? Does it mean as my girl correspondents say, that a girl's an idiot for "being good" and should "jump the traces" if she wants a husband and anything else, good or bad, from life?

Or—and here's the old, old subject—is it untrue that girls must neck and runk and be generally wild if they want dates?

I have letters from boys, too, and so many of them tell me that they want "just girl pals," but can't find them.

"The girls expect to be necked," they say, "and won't go out with the fellow if he doesn't."

I am inclined to think that there are almost as many boys looking for "unwild" girls as there are girls looking for "unwild" boys. The trick seems to be for these of a kind to locate one another.

But still, we have the question, "Does it pay to be decent?" It all depends upon what kind of coin you want to be paid. If you think that wild parties are the payment you want perhaps you won't go to so many of those affairs if you continue to believe that decency has some value.

Doesn't Work. But no one has ever been able to convince me that a girl who suddenly "cuts loose" was any happier with her new way of living. It doesn't suit her type. Conscience and all those generations of training behind her will make her as uneasy as a fish out of water.

No, all you girls who stay at home lonely and just waiting, even that dull way of living gives you more real happiness and peace than many dates if they must be won by murdering your real self.

It does pay to be decent. Ask any girl who tried to cut loose because she wanted good times. Many of them learn in time that this isn't their road to the Journey's End of Happiness. These are the girls who walk home. And stay there.

Until one of these boys who asks "aren't there any girl pals left?" comes along.

THE HAT—By Cynthia Grey. He talked and talked about that hat. It was sort of purplish, he said. And had a hunk of something sorta silvery and pinkish on the side. And it turned up just right. It made her hair look all soft and full of golden lights.

He said, he did, that some women certainly had the knack Of picking out hats and looking like a million dollars. He didn't see why all women couldn't have good taste.

He said lots more. Did she like it? She did not. He was her husband. She was his wife. The hat belonged to His stenographer.

Menus for the Family

Breakfast—Baked rhubarb, cereal thin cream, egg toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Salmon fritters, creamed cauliflower and carrots, whole wheat bread, apple sauce, milk, tea.

Dinner—Cream of celery soup, filet of sole with spinach and creole sauce, rye bread, molded fruit salad, toasted crackers, milk, coffee.

No dessert is suggested for the dinner menu since a fruit salad is planned. The creamed vegetable soup and the use of a vegetable with the fish make it unnecessary to serve another vegetable.

Any fish can be used in place of salmon in the luncheon fritters but canned salmon is universally available and it is chosen for the recipe.

Salmon Fritters
One cup drained and chopped salmon, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 2 eggs, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons olive oil, 1 cup flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 12 cup cold water.

Sprinkle salmon with lemon juice and parsley and let stand while mixing fritter batter. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Beat yolks of eggs well with water. Add flour and mix until perfectly smooth. Beat in oil. When mixture is perfectly blended add prepared fish. Fold in whites of eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Drop from tip of spoon into deep hot fat and cook for seven minutes. The fat should be hot enough to brown an inch cube of bread from the soft part of the loaf in 60 seconds or if a thermometer is used from 360 to 380 degrees Fahrenheit.

Drain fritters on soft absorbent paper when done and serve very hot.

Any good salad oil or melted butter can be used in place of olive oil.

The beautiful decorations in the home consisted of yellow and white. A fine two-course dinner was served and enjoyed by about twenty-five guests, the tables being decorated with flowers.

TO A LITTLE GIRL.

Ed. Harris, negro who killed a white man and two white children and then assaulted a white woman, was hanged, with all due legal formality, at Lexington, Ky., the other day.

Harris, crime was just about as atrocious as any we have ever heard of. It is no wonder that the people of Kentucky were stirred to a fierce anger by it.

Accordingly, it is easy to understand the emotions that made a parent write to the editor of the Louisville Herald-Post telling how a little girl—presumably the child of the parent who wrote the letter—knelt down and prayed:

"... and, dear God, don't let that man go where the little boy and the little girl he killed went—and please, dear God, don't let him go where my dear little brother whom we laid under the flowers went—and oh, please don't let any of us go to Heaven if that man is going to be there."

And the writer of the letter adds:

"Won't some editor with the gift to say it—some minister with the authority to interpret God's promise—assure the frightened children of Kentucky that all the prayers of all the preachers of all the churches on earth couldn't lift the creature they fear to Paradise?"

To attempt an answer to this appeal is very difficult. We know so little about the divine plan, we are so blind and limited when we try to conceive the scheme of eternal justice, that we cannot speak with great assurance about anything. But it seems as if some answer must be made.

And here it is:

"Dear Little Girl:

"A grown person should never try to advise a child about Heaven because all little children know so much more about it than any grown-up possibly can. They are nearer to it. It was made for them. You remember, your bible tells you that no one can ever enter the Kingdom of Heaven unless he becomes like a little child.

"But the next time you go into the beautiful Kentucky countryside, look about you and think. Look at the blue hills lying hazy in the distance, at the sunlight falling on the fields and farmhouses and forests, at the rivers winding down from the mountains, so cool and clear and sparkling. Or, if it's night, look up at the shining yellow stars in the dark sky, with the moon half-hidden behind the big white clouds.

"And then remember this, little girl: Heaven is just like these things. It's a place where everything is warm and pleasant and shiny, where little children can play all day long on the meadows and in the woods without ever finding anything to be afraid of. When it gets dark in Heaven it's a comfortable kind of dark.

"That's where your little brother, and those other children, are now.

"And we don't know just where that bad man that you're so afraid of is. But we know he isn't there. Perhaps, if he prayed to God for forgiveness, God has him in some special place where he can learn and be changed so that he, too, can become a little child again and enjoy the sunlight and the stars and the fields and rivers. We don't know.

"But we do know that Heaven is a place where children are never afraid. And we know that God is very loving and very kind—even more than your own father and mother are. So maybe—someday, who knows—you'll find that the bad man has become what all of us grown-ups must become—a child once more, that wouldn't hurt anybody.

"Let's all hope so, anyway, little girl. For hate is a mean thing to keep in our hearts. And every little child knows that somehow, sometime, God is going to make everything come all right—even for bad men."

FOR DIXON'S PROGRESS.

It is unfortunate that the school election could not have been held at some other time of year when the minds of the people were not occupied with other problems of a public nature, but the law is such that the coming Saturday, April 10th, is the only day on which it could be held. But even so, we can not believe that the people in the territory proposed for the new high school district will be so blind to the great benefits to be derived from better schools that they will fail to take advantage of this opportunity to have a splendid new township high school.

Get out and vote for the new high school district on Saturday. It means more to Dixon and the surrounding territory than we can easily comprehend.

FAIRNESS IN POLITICS.

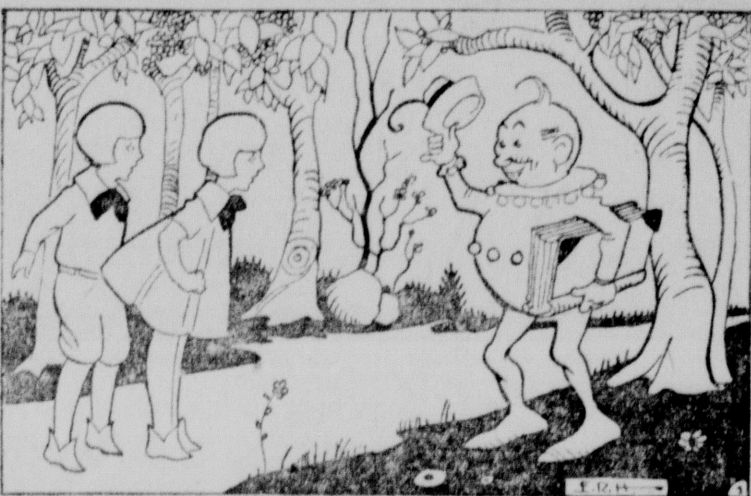

Next week the Republicans of this district will be asked to decide who they want for their member of the state senate. Of the two candidates, The Telegraph endorses Major A. T. Tourtellott of Lee county and we believe that the Major's candidacy should have the endorsement of the voters of the district.

It is Lee County's turn to have the senator and fairness in politics requires that the voters recognize Lee county's claim. But that reason is not the basis of Major Tourtellott's candidacy. He is entitled to the support of the republicans of the district because of his ability and integrity and his value to the district. Major Tourtellott can do things for the three counties that we do not believe his opponent can do. He can get state highways paved and secure recognition for this territory which will be of great value to every resident.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Clara Roberts Rector

NO 1—THE FAIRY RENT COLLECTOR

"Howdy folks," said he amiably.

Nobody was working the radio. Nobody was even thinking of it. The Twins were looking for their kites to fly.

But suddenly the radio went, "Who! Who! Who! Who!—see!"

"The idea!" said Nick. "What in the world's wrong with the crazy thing?"

"I wonder!" said Nancy staring at it.

But they were soon to know, for in a minute they heard a voice say faintly, "It's me! It's me! Mister Tingaling! Look for the magic shoes. They're right beside you. Look and see! I'm Mister Tingaling, the fairy landlord. And I have to collect rents. And I want you to go along. Put on the magic shoes and meet me between the lilac bush and the snow-bush at half past one."

"The radio went, 'Who! Who! Who! Who!—see!'"

"Yes, sir! Here are the shoes," cried Nick excitedly. "It's another adventure, sure as anything! Hurry up, Nan, the clock says half past one now and those bushes are away down by the gate."

Off came their everyday shoes and on went the fairy shoes!

And instantly the Twins were being carried along without the trouble of even taking a step, right through the house and down the steps and down the path to the gate where the two tall bushes stood.

Underneath the bushes it was quiet and dark and green—a sort of bower, you know. Exactly the place you would expect to find a fairy!

And pushing the leaves aside and stooping into the mysterious dark space, that's exactly what the Twins did find.

Not a beautiful gauzy fairy, like Silver Wings, but a fat jolly little fairyman, as round as a barrel and with a face like the moon. He wore an ice cream saucer hat with a feather in it, and he carried a very large pocketbook and a very large pencil and book.

"Howdy folks," said he amiably.

"I'm Tingaling, Mister Tingaling. I got that name from ringing door-bells. But you remember me, don't you?" he asked anxiously.

"Sure we do," said the Twins together. "Who, indeed, could forget the dear fat jolly little fellow if they had once seen him! We helped you one time before. It was loads of fun," they added.

"Fun! Is that what you call it," almost shrieked Mister Tingaling. "Trying to get the meadow people and wood people and all the other people of Out-of-Door Land to pay me money when they don't WANT to."

But all the time one could see that he was secretly delighted at being remembered. That is one thing about fairies, children. They do hate to be forgotten, even fat fairies.

Another thing that pleased him was to know that the Twins had had a good time.

"We had a perfectly splendid time," said Nancy. "And I don't think people dislike paying their rents. It's just that the Out-of-Door people, the squirrels and rabbits and woodchucks and all the other like to think that they are smarter than fairies, that's all."

"Oh, do you really think so?" beamed Mister Tingaling. "I certainly hope that's it, for I dislike being disliked. I always collect my rents on the thirty-second day of the month and this is the thirty-second day of the month in Fairyland!"

"Fairyland!" cried Nick. "Are we going to Fairyland?"

"Tush!" said Mister Tingaling. "Of course we are. Isn't the meadow and the garden and the whole world Fairyland in the spring?"

A STORY OF A GIRL OF TODAY

A THREAT

"I was very happy, Julie. I trust that letter of Tortoise's into my box and every time I moved I was conscious of the crackling of the paper and it sent a little glow all over me.

"I do not think I was ever so happy in all my life before that and I know I have never been so happy since. It almost hurt me, I was so afraid that it wouldn't last.

"Alas! It did not.

"But I didn't know it then. All I could think of was that I could give my mother that extra ten dollars a week that I had promised her and yet I could take lessons in voice culture from this wonderful teacher. I thought to myself that no one else in all this world had ever had such good fortune before.

"Of course it never entered my mind that I wouldn't make good. I know I have a voice and if God will only let me some day show the world what I can do, I won't care whether I have happiness or joy or pleasure. I only want to sing.

"That afternoon I received orders from Madame Seria that Miss Lawrence would be at the shop and that I was to put on a number of frocks that she had seemed to like. Miss Lawrence came in alone, but she didn't come to try on frocks. She was perfectly furious. She asked for Madame Seria and told her, not in the politest manner, that she must discharge me or lose a customer.

"I was just outside the curtain waiting to be called and when I heard this I almost fainted. I saw all my rosy dreams being dissipated. If it came to a choice between Lola Lawrence and Mamie Riley, Madame Seria would certainly not keep me.

"Lola Lawrence probably spent more during the year than any one person among all Madame's wealthy customers.

"Naturally I began to unbutton the dress I had been going to model for Miss Lawrence, when I heard Madame say:

"My dear Miss Lawrence, surely you will not ask me to let Miss Riley go when you know her story. I happen to know she is the only wage earner in her family and that she has a mother and an invalid sister to support. Surely you would not have me turn a girl like that out."

"She could easily get another place," was the sudden answer of Miss Lawrence. "I myself will give her a couple of hundred dollars to tide her over until she places herself, but I cannot have her here. I don't want ever to see her again. There's something about her that I cannot endure."

TOMORROW: A Threat Answered.

THE VERY IDEA

by Hal Cochran

MOM'S JOB

A man hies homeward every day when working hours are done. His mind is turned to loaf and play and things that make up fun. He longs to eat a home-cooked meal that wife has prepared. He knows how good he's going to feel as supper fire is shared.

So buried in such thoughts is he he seldom stops to think that tiredness comes with homework, and the wife is on the brink. It really looks so easy, when the supper's on the table. To realize that cooking food is work, he is not able.

Then wife takes a week-end trip, and leaves things on the shelf so dad, when he comes home at night, can cook his meals himself. The first attempt is not so bad. With actions rather crude, he rolls his sleeves and sails right in the job of cooking food.

The second and the third night, though, begin to tell their story. Dad wonders why he ever thought that mom was in her glory. But then, when she arrives back home and tackles work again, he once more thinks her job is soft—he's like all other men.

There's a heap more satisfaction getting by on push than on pull.

She was driving her new auto for the first time and couldn't understand how the cop could accuse her of going forty miles an hour, when she'd only been out fifteen minutes.

SEE THE WIFE: "Sure! I'll call you at 6 in the morning—but I know darn well you won't get up."

He spent his life complaining and when he was taken sick With gout, his friends were glad because

At least, he couldn't kick.

NOW, HONESTLY—Live and let live is no doubt a great idea.

But, why is it that so many things happen every day that tear it down? For instance, consider the fellow who gets a great kick out of life through doing for the other fellow as well as for himself; through giving as much or more, as he takes; through playing the fifty-fifty game in things in general, and through always being willing to help someone else, even at his own expense.

That's a fine spirit—except that for every man who plays life that way, there are ten men just waiting to take advantage of him.

When some men discover they are being flesh, they might try letting a barber shave them.

PATIENT—How do you think some warmer climate would help me, doc?

DOCTOR—My, gosh, man! That's what I'm trying to save you from.

Some young men, on leaving college, have a hard time deciding whether to go to work or get a job in their father's office.

COACHES OF ROCK RIVER CONFERENCE MEET HERE TONIGHT

Recognition for Light Football Teams to be Considered

Coaches of the Rock River Valley Conference of high schools will meet at the south side high school this evening to discuss several matters of importance, chief among which will be the advisability of organizing light weight football teams this year. Many of the coaches favor the lightweight eleven, but the question of limited candidates from the smaller schools of the conference enters and may result in three of the seven schools keeping out of the light weight division. Dixon, Sterling, Rock Falls and Rochelle have a sufficient number of candidates reporting each year to warrant the drafting of a schedule for light weights, but the smaller schools, Polo, Morrison and Mt. Morris, have experienced a limited list of candidates and would probably be unable to enter such teams. However, the three smaller schools will be given an opportunity to consider the matter this evening.

Boys' Team
Coach A. C. Bowers of the Dixon high school is very much in favor of the light weight schedule for the conference. He stated today that it would work a hardship upon the coach of such a crew, as the candidates would be eligible to be drawn into the heavy weight or first team when needed. There will be plenty of material for a light weight team in Dixon, but this will necessitate an additional coach. It is believed that by adopting the light weight plan in the Rock River Valley conference, a large number of candidates would be attracted to football and that eventually it would be very successful. It is possible that a schedule will be drawn this evening for a light weight division and the plan tried out this fall.

The coaches will also consider and outline plans for the annual Rock River Valley conference track meet which it will be held in this city. The date will be decided upon and other matters of importance disposed of.

BLIND WARDS AT STATE SCHOOL IN CAGE VICTORIES

Jacksonville Quintet Won Half of its Games During Season

Jacksonville, Ill., April 3—(AP)—The boys' basketball team of the Illinois School for the Blind, closed its winter season today with six victories out of 12 games against opponents with full vision and a total of 156 points scored to 121 for their opponents.

With an average of only 15 percent of normal vision the blind boys took up basketball last December and developed the short pass, the dribble, close guarding and short shots for the hoop with great effectiveness.

The star forward, Cox, with but one eye and only partial vision in that one, played all twelve games and scored 81.2 points a game.

Boosters, themselves without vision or nearly so, are kept advised of their team's movements on the floor by a play by play account by the cheer leaders and their rooting is thus entirely normal. Their games are further enlivened by music from the blind pupils' orchestra.

The principal benefit of the sport for the blind boys said R. W. Wood, managing director of the school, is that they are given a chance to enjoy another activity of normal youths and greatly to their interest and their class room activities.

A spectator at the games would be interested in watching their methods of play. Experiments have demonstrated that by far their best system is very short passes mixed with dribbles as their impaired vision prevents them from properly gauging the long passes. Their shots at the basket are consequently made from close range and are apparently made more through their sense of direction and distance than from actual vision.

On defense the team members guard their opponents very closely at all times, thus forcing many long shots, the blind school recovering the ball in a great many instances on its rebound from the back board.

Dixon Bowlers Landed Prizes in Ottawa Meet

Dixon bowlers made a good showing at the tournament at Ottawa which closed March 28, bringing home some of the prizes. The team finished in sixth place. Jack Hartzell rolled into first place in the singles event.

Secured tenth position in the doubles with Petersen and Rosbrook.

Jack Hartzell celebrated his victory at the Illinois Rock Valley tournament Saturday night on the Pastime alleys when he rolled within ten pins of a perfect score.

Hartzell started with a spare and then followed with eleven straight strikes for a total of 299 pins. In a three game series, he rolled 724 pins, an average of 241.3 pins for each game, which is a new record for this season on the Pastime alleys.

EICHLER BROS. GIVE MI-LADY'S WEAR PROMINENCE

Changes Made in Store to Draw Attention of Fair Sex

Dixon has many fine stores, with excellent stocks of merchandise in their various lines. One of these stores is Eichler Bros. Dry Goods Store, the Bee Hive, 115 First Street. Eichler Brothers are incorporated, Max and Adolph being the senior members of the firm in business for thirty-five years in Dixon, and who by strict business integrity and unfailing courtesy, and service have won the confidence of customers over a large territory, including Dixon and surrounding communities. They carry a first class line of merchandise in ladies' and children's ready-to-wear, millinery, staple dry goods, curtains, drapes, china, toys, etc.

In the last few weeks the large and convenient store, the Bee Hive, has been entirely repainted and decorated, and the second floor has been remodeled to conform to the needs of the ever enlarging trade in the ready-to-wear and millinery departments.

Green Predominates.
Throughout the store the keynote color is green, given in several different and restful shades. The walls and ceiling down stairs are done in a delicate light shade of green, ideal for the display of yard goods, especially large and varied this season, in crepes, silks, chiffons, georgettes, silk prints, delicate laces, hose, and beautiful merchandise of all kinds. The basement where toys and china, aluminum, are displayed is newly decorated.

On the second floor the walls have been done in two shades of green. The ceiling and upper walls are in a delicate green and the side walls in a deeper shade. The old shelving and cases have been removed and modern up-to-date booths have been built along the wall, on either side of the commodious room, for the display of the elegant gowns, coats, dainty lingerie, and ready-to-wear, in general. New cases have been built in with glass doors for the new millinery, with an excellent advantage as to display. Fitting rooms, nicely furnished are provided, also. The floor has been newly carpeted with a rich green velvet carpet, completing the delightful effect obtained. Green drapes, new furniture, and their members went to Sterling Thursday night and Tuesday night they went to Ashton where they conducted the initiatory ceremonies for a large number of candidates.

The members of Miss Clara Lahman's Sunday school class of the Methodist Sunday school enjoyed the day Friday at the home of their former teacher Mrs. Emma Crawford, who on that day was celebrating her 82nd birthday anniversary. It has been the custom of the class for several years to meet with Mrs. Crawford on that date. There were about twenty present. Rev. Sittler, pastor of the church was present and very kindly favored the elderly ladies with several solos of the old time songs that were sung at the old fashioned Camp meeting. They all report it one of the best times they have ever had. Mrs. Reigle who is spending the winter in Florida sent word to her daughter Mrs. Fred Hansen to see that the birthday cake was made and presented to Mrs. Crawford, and it sure was attended to right. Mrs. Crawford received several plants and bouquets, which added greatly to the occasion. Mrs. Herbert Schumaker of Rochelle a former member of the class was present and enjoyed the day with the ladies.

EICHLER BROS. GIVE MI-LADY'S WEAR PROMINENCE

Changes Made in Store to Draw Attention of Fair Sex

Dixon has many fine stores, with excellent stocks of merchandise in their various lines. One of these stores is Eichler Bros. Dry Goods Store, the Bee Hive, 115 First Street. Eichler Brothers are incorporated, Max and Adolph being the senior members of the firm in business for thirty-five years in Dixon, and who by strict business integrity and unfailing courtesy, and service have won the confidence of customers over a large territory, including Dixon and surrounding communities. They carry a first class line of merchandise in ladies' and children's ready-to-wear, millinery, staple dry goods, curtains, drapes, china, toys, etc.

In the last few weeks the large and convenient store, the Bee Hive, has been entirely repainted and decorated, and the second floor has been remodeled to conform to the needs of the ever enlarging trade in the ready-to-wear and millinery departments.

Green Predominates.
Throughout the store the keynote color is green, given in several different and restful shades. The walls and ceiling down stairs are done in a delicate light shade of green, ideal for the display of yard goods, especially large and varied this season, in crepes, silks, chiffons, georgettes, silk prints, delicate laces, hose, and beautiful merchandise of all kinds. The basement where toys and china, aluminum, are displayed is newly decorated.

On the second floor the walls have been done in two shades of green. The ceiling and upper walls are in a delicate green and the side walls in a deeper shade. The old shelving and cases have been removed and modern up-to-date booths have been built along the wall, on either side of the commodious room, for the display of the elegant gowns, coats, dainty lingerie, and ready-to-wear, in general. New cases have been built in with glass doors for the new millinery, with an excellent advantage as to display. Fitting rooms, nicely furnished are provided, also. The floor has been newly carpeted with a rich green velvet carpet, completing the delightful effect obtained. Green drapes, new furniture, and their members went to Sterling Thursday night and Tuesday night they went to Ashton where they conducted the initiatory ceremonies for a large number of candidates.

The YELLOW STUB by Ernest Lynn

COPYRIGHT 1926 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

"So Thaddeus Rand changed his mind, making you the administrator of his estate, leaving the bulk of his estate to Henry Rand, and some of it to you; with the proviso that if Henry Rand or his heirs were not satisfied by a certain time, the estate would be divided equally between you and a boy named John."

"That's about all that I learned from Mexico City, Church. It's enough, I think, especially since Jensen tells me you hired him to commit the murder and Divis confessed that he put that picture in Olga Maynard's apartment under orders from you."

Jimmy glanced again at his watch, and lifted the revolver. "Time's up, Church. Are you going to confess or are you going to die with a lie on your lips?"

"For God's sake, Rand, don't shoot!" Church's eyes were staring; they were glassy, and the perspiration was standing on his forehead in great beads. "Don't shoot, God! I'll confess, Rand. I did it, I did it. Olga Maynard's head down on his breast and his bulky frame quivered as the words poured from his mouth as a torrent. He was like a man gone mad—gibbering, unintelligible."

"You see," said Jimmy, "I knew Church. Now tell me why. Tell me, and I'll give you a chance. Refuse, and you won't leave this room."

"My God!" Church sobbed. "I don't know why Rand. I thought this house . . . spent a lot of money and got in debt. . . . I knew that if they ever found Henry Rand I'd go to jail. . . . Then one day a client of mine showed me a letter from the credit department of Royal Brothers' department store in Grafton. . . . It was signed Henry Rand. . . . I investigated, and was sure he was the one we were looking for."

"You didn't look very far, or very hard, Church. You didn't want to find him."

"How much did you pay Jensen, five thousand dollars."

"And where does Divis come in?"

"He didn't have anything to do with it. I didn't think he knew anything about it."

"Divis was just another of your handy men, eh?"

Church hung his head and was silent.

"And why were you so anxious to get me out of town, Church?"

Jimmy waited, but the other did not answer.

"Partly because you thought I was in your way with Mary Lowell?" Jimmy hesitated on the name, and Church nodded.

"After that," Church admitted, "because I thought you might find out I was handling the estate."

"You dirty dog!" Jimmy shot at him. "I wish I could think of some punishment that wasn't too good for you. You rat! You know what led to your downfall, Church? A ticket stub—just an insignificant little yellow stub. Some time when you have occasion to reflect on this you can curse the day you delivered yourself into Jensen's hands and Jensen was careless enough to leave the yellow stub behind."

"Did you think your secret would be safe with him? Didn't he have sense enough to realize he would blackmail you for the rest of your days?"

"I had enough on him," said Church dully, staring at his feet.

Jimmy tossed the revolver to the middle of the table, then leisurely found himself a cigarette and lit it.

"I may as well tell you now that I lied to you when I said Divis got that picture from you. And I lied, too, when I told you Jensen had implicated you. Jensen's dead, and he died without mentioning your name. All I knew for sure, Church, was that you were administrator of Thaddeus Rand's estate. That and the fact that someone overheard Divis say Church had given him some money for Jensen."

He shrugged and walked deliberately away from the table. "The only thing you've done, Church, is to make it easier for us with your confession."

He had turned his back on Church, and he did not see the sudden look of cunning light in the other man's eyes. Church was slowly drawing himself up in his chair—drawing himself up for a spring.

"You've saved us a lot of trouble," Jimmy began, but the sentence was never finished. With a quick leap Church had reached the revolver and he now held it in his hand.

"I did, eh?" he snapped, and there were in his voice hate, contempt, new life. "I did? Well, listen, I'm not through yet, see? Do you know how good a confession is when it's drawn from a man at the point of a gun? Not worth that," he snapped his finger.

"I did it, all right. I'm telling you again, but don't think you're going to have such easy sailing. Jensen's dead, eh? And Divis doesn't know. Well, they'd have a pretty hard time proving it on me, even with what you've got. But I'm taking no chances. I'm going to kill you and then I'm going to clear out!"

With the revolver pointed at Jimmy, he backed slowly to the safe and fumbled in a pigeon hole. He leisurely stuck some papers in his pocket, never once taking his eye off Rand.

"I'm clearing out, Rand—after I finish with you," and he tapped the revolver significantly. "If I'm overcautious, remember you are a housebreaker. They have nothing on me for that."

He laughed, and slowly raised the weapon until it was on a level with his eyes.

"Now, damn you," he said.

CHAPTER LIV

It never occurred to a man's eyes if blazed in Church's. And there was a maddening deliberateness to him, too, as if he found much to enjoy in the situation and was reluctant to have it end so soon.

But for a man threatened with sudden death, Rand was surprisingly cool. He said: "And you still admit it, Church?"

"Sure," the other sneered, "but little good it will do you, you young pup."

"I just wanted to make sure," remarked Jimmy with a shrug and went on calmly smoking his cigarette.

And now bafflement was written on the other man's face. How could this fresh young upstart be so provokingly cool? How could he jest with death in that manner? A sudden sinking fear assailed him that, somehow, something was wrong—that there was something he didn't know. His finger tightened on the trigger.

"Why don't you shoot, Church?" and Jimmy, facing him squarely, took a step toward him. "Go ahead, get it over with."

"Damn you, I will!" His teeth were set. Grimly he pulled the trigger, and instead of the barking shot he heard a mocking click. He pulled it again, and again the hammer snapped on an empty chamber.

Rand's taunting laugh was in his ears. "Empty, Church. Only one bullet in it, and I wanted that on your coat."

"You fool," he said, "do you think I'm crazy? Do you think I'd deliberately walk away from that gun if it was loaded? I thought you'd do that very thing, Church—confess and then repudiate it the moment you knew I wasn't going to kill you. You see, I anticipated you, and you played right into my hands by admitting it over again just a minute ago."

"I can still repudiate it, Rand," said Church, and it was like the last baring of teeth of a cornered rat. He jumped for the table. "And I can still kill you."

But Jimmy was in his way, and before Church could reach the table drawer there was a loud tramping of feet and a sudden influx of blue-coated men. Strong hands held Church, pinned his arms behind him.

"You see, Church," said Jimmy, "you can't very well repudiate it, after all. These men were planted outside the room. They've even got a court stenographer. You got every word, didn't you, Lieutenant?"

Jimmy turned to O'Day, who was standing beside him.

"Didn't miss a thing, Rand. O'Day was eyeing Church wrathfully. "You dirty sneaking dog!" he observed and turned his back.

Jimmy opened the table drawer, pulled out Church's revolver and flung it on the table.

He leaned toward Church who was still held tightly from behind. "There are two reasons why I didn't kill you, Church," he said. "I guess you know what one of them was—a girl we both know. The other—I gave my word to O'Day."

He had time now to relax, and to think; and the bitterness which had been in his heart since Henry Rand's tragic death was somewhat lessened by the thought that the man responsible for it stood before him, beaten, exposed and cornered. That and the thought that Mary Lowell would be waiting for him.

And then the poignant realization that Olga Maynard who had been helplessly enmeshed in this thing and buffeted about, was lying alone on a hospital bed—friendless, without cheer and comfort. Somehow it dulled the keen edge of the victory he had won; his triumph was hollow.

Blind, hot anger surged over him as he regarded Church, the man responsible not only for his father's murder but for Olga's plight as well.

His face within inches of Church's, his hands tightly clenched to keep himself under control and not strike him, he said: "The really contemptible thing about you is that you would have passed the blame on to an innocent woman. You knew that we had something on you ever since the night Olga Maynard and I saw Jensen in that automobile. And then you found out, somehow, that she was suspected."

"So you planned the kidnapping, and had my father's picture planted in her apartment. Church if I could forgive everything else you have done—which I can't, of course—I could never forgive that."

He turned to O'Day, his face twisting with pity. "Lieutenant, they treat her—that man Jensen—because she wouldn't write a confession. God knows what they'd have done with her after she had."

"Killed her, more than likely," growled O'Day. "Rand, I'm an old fool. I'm sorry for thinking what I did about her, and I'm man enough to apologize when I see her again. But this here bird," and he indicated the cowering Church, "is cooked. There's not only murder against him, but abduction and a number of other things."

"By the way, Church," he continued, "what was that you stuck in your pocket?" He fumbled with his large hand through Church's coat, fished out a folded paper and spread it on the table.

"It's a will, Rand—the will of Thaddeus Rand. I guess this is yours."

"Take care of it," said Jimmy. Later on, Hold on, though, guess I'll read it over myself."

"Yep," he said later, when he had gone over it. "It's just as Mooney's informant, whoever he was, said. 'They'll be wanting it as evidence Henry Rand or his heirs.' Samuel Church executor."

He looked at Church again, but he was speaking to O'Day. "I believe that's all, Lieutenant. Once more dull depression settled on him, and the draught of victory was bitter on his lips. There was Mary, the girl he loved, no longer unattainable but waiting to hear from him. And now that he knew she was his, and his agonized longing was at an end, his triumph was suddenly flat, like that of some seeker who, blind to everything but his goal, finds it, and when it is in his grasp pauses to look behind him and see what has been overlooked in his quest."

There was Olga, broken in spirit, hurt, with nothing to look forward to. And she loved him, had told him with her lips, with her eyes, with faithful devotion to him.

What a debt he owed her—what a how can I pay it? He thought. "And God help me," he agonized, debt.

"Church has licked me, after all," he thought. Surprisingly, it was Church himself who broke into his reverie. He said, with a forced smile and affected indifference, "Congratulations, Rand. You win. Lots of money now."

You can marry her, and they lived happily ever after."

"Shut up, you!" growled O'Day. He had missed nothing. There was a rare quality of sympathy and understanding beneath his tough hide.

It had not occurred to Jimmy that he was wealthy. He failed to realize it even then. He thought, "Yes, I suppose I can—and trample on that poor girl you dragged into this."

To Church he remarked quietly, "You'll never realize what you've done to me," and turned away to hide his face.

A struggle went on within him. As long as Mary had been out of his reach he had been indifferent to everything else—as indifferent, at any rate, as a sensitive nature would permit.

Then his path had seemed so clear. Put now it branched and one way lay desire and the other way—was it duty? He thought of going to Olga and saying, "You'll be taken care of now. Your troubles are over. I've got influential friends. I'll see that you get your start—your career."

But the words in his mind were mere empty phrases. It would be nothing short of hypocrisy, he thought.

He groaned aloud. "Lord, that's not paying her back. I owe her everything," and was startled when O'Day put a hand on his shoulder.

"Come on, O'Day was saying. "Let's get out of here. You need to sleep it over. Too much of a strain. You're tired, and you're hurt, and your nerves are all in pieces. You need quiet."

He turned toward his men. "Bring him along, boys," and pointed to Church.

When he spoke again to Rand his manner was bluff and hearty. "Did I tell you how Mooney got that dope from Mexico City? No? Well, he called me up first and sent the telegram on as confirmation. I told him I'd want it. Seems he had an old friend who used to be on the force years ago in Grafton and who went down to Mexico, learned the language and then settled down in some business or other."

"Mooney got in touch with him, and this fellow did some gumshoe work and finally found those Mexican lawyers Thaddeus used to deal with. They told him the dope and he relayed it right back to Mooney. Simple as pie wasn't it—after he got on the right track?"

Jimmy heard him listlessly. As they were leaving the front door, O'Day, with a sweeping glance around him, said, "Fine house you've got here, Rand. Do you realize, my boy, that it's yours. Why, you're a millionaire, lad!" He whispered, "Think of it!"

And then he threw an arm around the other's shoulders. "Aw, buck up, lad, buck up!" It has been hard, but you pulled through on top. Imagine that guy spending your money all these years. But it's yours now, and let's hope you put it to better use."

"I hope," said Jimmy thoughtfully, "I hope I'll be generous, that's all."

He watched dully while the officers climbed into the automobile and pulled Church in with them.

He climbed alongside O'Day and sat silent, his mind a muddy jumble of thoughts as he tried to reach some kind of decision. And then, frowning, he set his teeth. He knew.

"Want me to drop you off at home?" O'Day asked, "or are you coming down with us?"

"I'm going down there later to meet Harry Colvin," said Jimmy. "First of all, though, I've got to see Olga Maynard."

Watching Major League Teams in Training Practice

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If major league batters can pile up averages as handsome as they have been collecting in training camps, baseball fans are due to see some fancy-slugging this season.

The Yankees, for instance, have been pounding the ball in the southland lumbering up games to the tune of a 350 average. Gehrig tops the list of Yank club wielders with 444.

Sunday's exhibition games revealed some heavy slugging by other teams. The St. Louis Browns who have been making some keen records with the bat, touched Chattanooga pitchers for 19 blows. Their fellow townsmen, the Cardinals pounded out 10 hits from the Steers at Dallas and incidentally annexed their 28th straight win.

At Shreveport, La., the Chicago White Sox collected 14 blows for a 4-2 win over the Texas Leaguers and the Phillies managed to connect ball and bat for 11 hits against Baltimore. The Cleveland Indians held the heavy end of the batting controversy against New Orleans, winning 3 to 1. In this game, however, good pitching in addition to good batting was a factor. The work of George Uhle of Cleveland was highly pleasing. Besides his striking he also made a three base hit in the ninth bringing in the winning run and it was the first time this year a pitcher had gone the entire nine innings of an exhibition game.

Ebmke and Zahniser of the Boston Red Sox also had a good day on the mound against Louisville, only one hit being obtained off the two, beating the Colonels 2-0. At the same time the Boston Braves were taking the measure of Jersey City, hard socking supplying the winning element.

Nearly all the big league aggregations now have pulled stakes from southern and western training camps. Several moved out today including the Chicago Cubs who left Los Angeles.

With games planned every day until the opening of the season, the Cincinnati Reds entered Georgia to meet Rochester at Waycross today. Luque has rejoined the team after a week's absence at the bedside of his mother in Havana.

The Pittsburgh Pirates started their last siege of training today against Indianapolis at Hot Springs, Ark.

After being trimmed 8-5 by the Columbus American Association at Fort Benning, Ga., on Sunday the Washington Senators today bathed in seven games pre-season series with the Giants, playing five games in four cities on the way home and the last two at Washington next Saturday and Sunday.

The Brooklyn Dodgers, having lost six straight, hope to beat the Yanks at Nashville today. A victory today would give the Philadelphia Athletics the city championship over the Phillies, the American Leaguers already having won three games of a seven game series.

Cochrane, Athletics' catcher, has an engagement with a police magistrate and it is doubtful if he will be able to be in the lineup. His automobile seriously injured a pedestrian.

Another seeker for more salary apparently has lost out. Terry of the Giants failed to see McGraw for a conference over pay at Memphis, where the Giants trimmed the Southern Association team 1-0 yesterday. "Terry is not needed" was McGraw's comment.

Church

BETHUEL REVIVALS

Satan was declared as man's greatest enemy, by Rev. Elmer Moser Friday night at the Evangelistic service at Bethel United Evangelical church. In speaking on "God's Arch Enemy and Man's Foe," Mr. Moser showed that Satan purposes to keep people from Christ, to keep Christ from people, and to minimize God before them. He described very vividly the power and purpose of this mighty personality.

The evangelist said in part: "The existence of Satan is a declared fact of the Word of God. He is not a mere influence or principle, he is a person. To him are ascribed all the characteristics that make up a person. He can devise, he has memory, knowledge, will, speech, emotion, organizing ability, makes war, performs miracles and has many other characteristics of personality. Many names of different significance are given to him to show the tremendous power and personality of his being."

"Satan is not a mere man, but the appointed cherub who brooded over the domain of God, with power, dignity, and ability second only to that of the Trinity. Although he has great power and knows a great deal, yet he is not omnipotent, nor omniscient, nor omnipresent."

"Satan is the author of sin. He questions the Word of God. He tempts to sin, ensnares people, blinds the eyes of men, and puts wicked purposes in their hearts. He endeavors to hinder the prayer life of Christians. He enters into men. He wants people to be moral, refined, dignified, honest and even to be church members but not Christians. His greater object is to keep men from accepting Jesus Christ as their personal Savior and to keep Christ from them. He accuses the believer to God and accuses and minimizes God to men. He deludes, misrepresents and dictates the whole world program. Satan has power to tear down, but not to life up."

"Men can overcome Satan and his mighty power only as they accept Christ as their Savior and put on the whole armor of God as described in the sixth chapter of Ephesians."

Evangelist Moser will preach Sunday morning at 10:45 on the subject, "All the Way" and in the evening at 7:30 on "The Living Dead."

Many favorable comments are heard concerning the clear, convincing scriptural preaching of Evangelist Moser at Bethel United Evangelical church. To him soul saving is not a side line, but the most important work in life, and therefore he endeavors and succeeds in reaching the hearts of his hearers by his messages.

Yesterday morning in speaking on "All the Way" he emphasized the Christian's need of going all the way with Christ in prayer, Bible study, service, and soul winning. He said when Christ went to the Garden of Gethsemane, eight of the disciples went as far as the gate, three went a little way into the Garden with him, but he went a little farther; many are gate-Christians, some go a little farther. He wants us to go all the way with him.

In the evening he spoke on "The Living Dead." The necessity of the New Birth, as stated in John 3:3, 5, 7, was emphasized. He said in part:

"If you are not born from above you are as dead to spiritual things as a corpse is dead to physical things. The Bible divides men into two classes, saved and lost. You are either a saint or a sinner."

"Why is it necessary to be born of the Spirit of God? Because of man's nature. He is void of spiritual understanding. He has a rebellious spirit against the will of God. Man's spiritual nature is absolutely dead. It is also necessary because of the holiness of God."

"What does it mean to be born of the Spirit of God? It does not mean merely going to church and religious meetings. It does not mean doing good works, nor reformation, nor baptism. Church membership, advanced education, refinement, or religiousness are not the New Birth. To be born of the Spirit of God is to become a partaker of a new life through faith in Christ Jesus."

"The evidence of this New Birth is living a right life, doing righteousness, not practicing sin; loving the brethren; believing that Jesus is the Christ, overcoming the world."

"The great question is are you saved? If you are not you will never enter the Kingdom of God. You may visit the great cities of the earth and ride on their boulevards, but you will never see nor walk the streets of the City of God, without being born of the Spirit of God. You may see the trees of the forests of the world, but not the tree of life. You may see the thrones of the Potentates of earth, but not the throne of the Lamb of God, unless you are born of the Spirit of God."

These meetings will continue each night this week except Saturday at 7:30. On Tuesday and Friday afternoons at 4 o'clock Mr. Moser will speak to children.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH NOTES

The congregation enjoyed a very pleasant Easter Day. Aims in the Bible School for attendance and offering were not quite attained, but a happy spirit of devotion and fellowship prevailed. Nine new members were added to the church; and the musical numbers of the large choir, under the capable direction of Miss Photo and Mr. Leydig contributed greatly to the sacredness of the morning worship hour.

Wednesday evening, 7:30 a reception will be tendered the new members of the church, both Easter converts and those uniting since the last public reception, in November. The first of the month all-day meeting of the Ladies' Aid society will be held Wednesday, with the "family dinner."

Mrs. F. L. Spiller, 422 S. Peoria Ave., will be hostess to the C. C. Circle, Thursday afternoon, assisted by Mesdames McGinnis and H. Reynolds.

Mrs. Wm. J. Birtell, 621 Brinton Ave., will entertain the Young Ladies Mission Circle Tuesday evening, with Mrs. Frank Warren in charge of the program.

DIXON TEMPLARS INVITED TO BIG FETE IN CHICAGO

Presentation of Round the World Beauseant to be Feature

An interesting and significant event for the Knights Templar of Illinois, invitations for which have been received by members of the Dixon commandery, will be the presentation of the International Traveling Beauseant by the Bethlehem Commandery of Seattle, Washington, to Siloam commandery of Chicago, who will receive it as the representative of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of the state. The Siloam commandery in turn will present the beautiful black and white standard to some commandery of another jurisdiction, which plan will be followed until the emblem has been received in every jurisdiction of the commandery in the world.

The emblem is an exact reproduction of the battle flag of the Ancient Templars. It is half white and half black—the white signifying that those who carry it are fair and favorable to the friends of Christ and the black indicating that they are dark and terrible to His enemies.

The Beauseant was started on its pilgrimage around the world by Cyrene Preceptory of Toronto, Canada, delivering in March 29, 1921, to Hugh de Payens commandery at Buffalo, N. Y., March 24, 1922. It was presented to St. John's commandery, Philadelphia, which delivered it Nov. 4, to Columbia Commandery, Washington, D. C.

On February 10, 1923, it was carried by Columbia Commandery to Marion, Ohio, where it was presented to Marion Commandery No. 36. This Commandery made the pilgrimage across the country and on August 2, 1923, presented the sacred emblem to Hollywood Commandery No. 56, Hollywood, California, with most impressive ceremonies in the Hollywood Bowl in the presence of thousands of people.

On this occasion the presentation address was prepared by the late President Harding, who was a member of Marion Commandery, and was to have been delivered by him in person. At it was he lay stricken with his fatal illness and the address was read by Sir Knight George Christian, his private secretary. This address, which was one of the most eloquent and impressive of his career, was the last public utterance of the lamented President.

The journey made by Hollywood Commandery to Portland was representative of a new measure of human progress.

On the evening of Saturday, May 17, 1924, the Scottish Rite Cathedral made a delightful setting for the reception given the Beauseant by Oregon Commandery No. 1. Visitors from other northwestern states attended the ceremonies, which were most creative and impressive.

On February 28, 1925, Oregon Commandery No. 1 journeyed to Victoria, B. C., and formally presented the Beauseant to Western Gate Preceptory No. 20 of that city.

On July 29, 1925, Western Gate Preceptory No. 20 journeyed to Seattle, Washington, during the grand convolve and formally presented the Beauseant to Bethlehem Commandery No. 19 of that city. The beautiful ceremonies took place at the University of Washington Stadium.

The next jurisdiction to be honored by the reception of the sacred emblem will be the State of Illinois. This beautiful emblem is to be brought by Bethlehem Commandery No. 19, Knights Templar, of Seattle, to Illinois and Siloam Commandery No. 54 will receive it, as the representative of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of the State.

As the late President Harding said in his address read at Hollywood: "The reproduced Beauseant will not encounter the storms, the fanaticism and the romances of knighthood which attended the original banner, but I trust its journey will encounter no less of conscience and no less of noble purpose."

Dr. Cummings' Health Column

BY DR. HUGH S. CUMMING
Surgeon General, U. S. Public Health Service

Male mosquitoes are vegetarians. The females of many species of mosquitoes have developed a taste for blood and blood has become indispensable to them for the development of their eggs.

The mosquito usually lays her eggs upon the surface of the water. The eggs of some species float separately. The eggs of other species adhere and float like a small raft. In a day or two, under ordinary conditions, the eggs hatch out into larvae, commonly known as wiggle-tails.

The larva is in reality an aquatic animal but it is a true air breather. The larva of the malarial mosquito ordinarily rests and feeds at the surface of the water. It usually lies in an almost horizontal position, its tail touching the filmy surface of the water.

The larvae of mosquitoes move about more or less in search of food but at intervals of a minute or two they come to the surface of the water for air.

The length of time that a mosquito remains in the larval stage varies with the species and for each species varies again with the temperature. The larva after moulting is transformed into a curiously shaped creature known as the pupa.

The pupa remains quietly at the surface of the water except when disturbed. It has no mouth and does not feed. The pupa stage lasts for two or three days, at the end of which time the adult winged insect emerges.

Nine days from the time the eggs are laid, in many cases the winged insect appears. Warmth favors the rapid development of the mosquito, cold retards the growth.

Anopheles or malarial mosquitoes rarely bite in the day time. Anopheles is shy and easily driven off and will rarely bite you when you are moving about. She is more apt to bite you when you are asleep. Her bite is less painful than that of other mosquitoes and she does not sing so loudly. On this account when mosquitoes are much complained of they are rarely Anopheles and there can be many Anopheles about without much complaint.

New Dry Organization Announced in Oregon

Portland, Ore., April 3.—(AP)—The Dry Legion of America, a temperance organization to be national in scope and having for its purpose the strict enforcement of laws, was launched here today.

Dr. Clarence True Wilson, secretary of the Methodist board of public morals, is president and Governor Walter M. Pierce of Oregon, honorary president, the statement said. The organization has received the approval of Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania and J. D. Brown, former president of the Farmers Union, the statement added and continued "when the idea is financed on a large scale some nationally known character like Smedley D. Butler will be asked to become permanent general." Temporary headquarters will be at Portland.

The GOLDEN COCOON

"The Golden Cocoon" with Helene Chadwick is a picturization of this novel by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

SYNOPSIS

Molly Cochran, wife of the Texas Governor, left home when threatened with exposure of an innocent but suspicious-appearing incident in her girlhood. She feared her husband's political career would be imperiled. Now she is in New York, doing secretarial work for Myron Eldredge, the dramatic critic, who is helping her, too, with her dramatic efforts. Eldredge, not knowing her real identity, has been talking about Cochran and has just told her that the Governor is going to marry another woman.

The lady—Molly saw her picture often in the papers—was both a product and leader of Washington circles; daughter of a Senator, youthful widow of a former Cabinet Minister. Rich, beautiful, admired—she had, it seemed, refused more than one brilliant offer. She was a frequent guest at the Cochran home, both in Washington and in the South.

In the press, the tragedy of Cochran's earlier marriage was dwelt on affectingly—for the benefit of a sentimental public, always more curious about a great man's intimate personal life than about his theories touching the advancement of the universe.

Arthur Bancroft's name figured frequently in the city papers, as a prominent club man, politician, financier. From the home sheets, Molly had gathered occasional items about Stephen. "Old Jim" Dwyer's stroke, "so long overdue," proved no boon to his son-in-law. He had tied up his money so hard and fast in trust for Susan that Renfro could not touch a sou of it without her consent. Whether this the case, or whether

"Stephen, I'm sorry, I'd do anything I could to help you—"

—as was intimated in the final "grounds for action"—drink and a weakness for younger and slender ladies had been his twin offenses; at all events, Mrs. Susan had sloughed him off. The affair had gone pretty hard with him. She had cut him off without a cent.

On the occasion of the New York premiere of Molly's second play, Myron Eldredge, who had been across again on special correspondence duty, chanced to be at home on leave. He had been in a training camp on road, and expected to return soon to the front with a machine-gun battalion. After the performance they slipped into a quiet, downtown restaurant for supper. Eldredge saw some people he knew and excused himself to go over and speak to them.

"Shall I bring the entrée now, madame?"

Molly started as the waiter spoke just behind her shoulder. "No, not yet," she said, and glanced round the embankment of fountain and ferns which screened their table from the rest of the room. She wondered vaguely what had kept Eldredge so long.

The waiter bowed and withdrew to a small serving table opposite, where he seemed to be doing something at a chafing-dish. Raising her eyes presently to the mirror over the table, she saw that he was watching her intently. She had a brief, smiling impression of dark hair, prematurely white in patches, of a face once handsome but riddled and punctured with hard living—pale, too, with an unwholesome pallor. Then something leaped out at her from the mirror. Ironie, dark eyes held hers in a mocking challenge. While she watched, fascinated, the mockery traveled by slow degrees downward. The mouth drooped a little, also ironically at the lower left corner. It was Stephen.

He finished at the chafing-dish and approached her. He drew a newspaper clipping from an inside pocket and laid it by her plate. "This may have escaped your attention," he observed in his most deliberate drawl.

Molly glanced down: "ARTHUR BANCROFT DIES AT LONG ISLAND HOME."

"I thought that would interest you."

Molly shook her head. She folded the clipping and pushed it back to him. "Not particularly." "No...?" He favored her with his most ingenuously appealing smile. "Then possibly the fact that I alone am left..."

"Stephen, what are you doing here—like this waiter?" He winced. The unhealthy pallor deepened. She could see him in the mirror. But the next moment his head went up again with something of the old-time insolent bravado. "Well, it's all your fault, if you must know—your damned cleverness in outwitting us. It cost me the Governorship and incidentally—Susan. That's what she'd married me for, you see..."

The head waiter appeared round the bank of ferns, and Renfro bent down, scribbled something on his pad as if taking an order. "There's my address. You'd better tell me where I can see you to-morrow."

"We have nothing more to say to each other." "I must beg to differ..." Again the naively engaging smile, the ironic drop to the lower left corner of his mouth. "Gregory Cochran, who hobnobs with premiers and presidents and emperors—marries again—the long lost wife supposed dead. The newspapers and the politicians, unless I'm greatly mistaken, will purchase that at a price. I'm giving you the first bid, that's all." "I see—you want money."

Molly had been watching him in the mirror—a revision and pity and a certain deep sadness. There was more here than drink, more even than mental and moral disintegration. Those could not have worked so swiftly. Trembling hands, twitching muscles, the glassy film overspreading at times the mocking, dark eyes, told another story. Whisky was hard to get.

She glanced around the ferns to make sure Eldredge was not yet in sight. Then she said: "Stephen, I'm sorry, I haven't a great deal of money, but I'd do anything I could to help you—not because of your threats, but for the memory of an old and once beautiful friend. For the rest, you don't listen. For the rest, you don't imagine anybody would publish such a story on the mere word of a waiter in a restaurant, a—she made a slight pause—"drug addict."

The ironic droop at his lip changed to a sneer, almost to a snarl. "If he tries to marry this woman, you'll soon find out whether they'll publish it or not! Drug addict or not, evidence is evidence..."

"I think you'd better go now," Molly suggested, as she saw Eldredge crossing the room.

Eldredge, who was in the midst of explaining what had kept him, broke off abruptly. "What's up? Seen a ghost?"

Molly nodded. "Let's go home," she said.

CHAPTER XXX

When he had gone, she telephoned at once to the railroad station. The next train for Washington left within the hour. Then she changed her dress, put a few things into a bag—ordered a taxi. Her mind had been already made up. She was going to Greg.

How many times she had been on the verge of it before, how sorely she had been tempted! Now that she was actually going it seemed absurdly simple and commonplace. She was going to Washington, going to Greg. She kept saying the words over and over to herself, trying to realize their meaning. Going to Washington—going to Greg. She arrived in the early morning. She strolled incuriously around the Capitol and the public buildings until the hour when she thought his office might be open. When she entered the modest waiting-room—Cochran's office was not in one of the official buildings—she found it filled already to overflowing. A courteous but firm secretary advised her that her turn would not come until the day after tomorrow. Molly said she would wait. All that day she waited—and the next.

At a few minutes before closing time on the second day the secretary beckoned to her. Some of the appointment. If she could be brief—verbooseness wouldn't help her with Mr. Cochran anyway. This with a smile, as one who gives a friendly tip. Perhaps he felt sorry for her because she had waited so long.

Scouting in Lee and Ogle Counties Area

Fellows now is the time for you to do a good turn for your feathered friends. The Robins, Blue Jays, and many other birds that have come to their summer homes a little early are going to find it rather hard to get anything to eat for the next few days with all the ground covered with snow. When it lets up go out and clear away a place and scatter either bread crumbs or fine ground feed around so the birds will have something to eat. Make a report at Scout headquarters to your Scoutmaster as we will be glad to know that you have helped our Feathered Friends.

Two new troops are starting next week and we would like to start them off with a lot of pep. If you wish to get in either the American Legion or the GYRO Troop let us know at Scout Headquarters.

SCOUTS TO THE RESCUE

After wandering for nearly seven hours through snow-covered Ohio hills, a searching party of Boy Scouts and a local farmer found a lost 4-year-old boy. The child, Francis Herschfeld of Toledo, accompanied by his dog "Count," wandered away from his home during a snowstorm. Troops of Toledo Boy Scouts, a squad of the city's police, and numerous citizens, upon hearing of the disappearance of the little fellow, scoured ravines and woods near the town. Every inch of territory within a radius of more than two miles from the boy's home was carefully combed. Just as the searchers were about to give up, Ralph Galloway, a farmer, and several Scouts returned to his farm and made a final search in a strip of land near by. Here the boy was found almost exhausted, feebly struggling along. During his entire wanderings the dog "Count" had kept at his little master's side. When the boy was faint and slumped down in the snow, the dog lay down beside him. The story was read in the footprints by the Scouts as they followed the tracks of the pair.

THESE WOMEN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

HARRY MORTON, wealthy, attractive to women, middle-aged and unmarried, lives with his adopted daughter, AUDREY, in a fine home in Rochester, but spends much of his time in a apartment that he maintains in New York. Gossips of Rochester have never learned exactly what his business is.

He sends to South America, with the promise of a job, a man whom he calls SMITH, and who claims to be the stepfather of Audrey, after Smith reappears at the end of 18 years' absence.

NONA, a beautiful New York girl, in love with Morton and madly jealous of him, tries to humiliate him by enticing him into a trap by means of another girl and a man, but Morton laughs at the plot and leaves. Nona comes to his apartment to plead for forgiveness, and, as he is telling her what he thinks of her proceedings, he discovers Audrey watching them.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

(The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER VII

"AUDREY!" said Morton sharply. "I told you to wait in your room until I sent for you."

"I know—I know—I know." The girl ran down the stairs, repeating the two words over and over.

At Morton's exclamation of "Audrey!" Nona lifted her head and stared at the girl came into the room. Nona's arms were thrown back loosely over the arms of the chair and there was agonized amazement in her eyes.

"Who is she—who is she!" she gasped.

"Miss Morton," answered Morton tersely. Turning to Audrey he continued:

"Why did you do what I told you not to do?"

Apparently she did not hear him. Leaning slightly forward, her hands pressing back as if she were thrusting herself away from an invisible wall, she faced Nona. For a breathless instant the two girls stared at one another.

"I don't know you had a daughter," cried Nona.

Morton started to speak, hesitated as he glanced from one girl to the other, and then retreated to a long, heavy table that stood behind him and seated himself on its edge. It was Audrey who answered.

"He has no daughter," she said. "He adopted me. Who are YOU and what are you doing talking to him about love?"

Nona moved her hands feebly and her head sank back a little. Something like abject terror was in her eyes.

"Do you live here with him?" her voice fluttered, and she spoke the words with difficulty. "Are you—his daughter?"

"Audrey!" said Morton, and he moved, and her blue eyes did not waver in their gaze into the other black eyes. Her own voice was full and clear.

"I don't know who you are to ask me anything," she said. "All I know is that you have been making him trouble—making trouble for the dearest man that ever lived in the world. You are the woman who writes him notes and calls him on the telephone." She said this accusingly.

Nona moved her head in assent. "Yes, I am—one of them, anyway. Are you really—really his adopted daughter?"

Andrey stamped her foot. "Of course I am. But tell me who you are, coming into my house!"

"I am only the woman who loves him," said Nona, faltering.

Audrey swung quickly to look at Morton, who still sat on the edge of the table swinging his foot. He was watching them as one might watch the progress of a play.

"He doesn't love you," said Audrey, turning back toward Nona. "I can see it in his face."

Nona lifted her hand defensively, then let it fall. Fatigue and pain and trouble had made her face years older than it was when Morton saw her the night before. Her mouth was drawn and the rouge upon her mouth looked as it might look upon the lips of death.

The younger girl, on the vantage ground of her own home, held Nona spiritually defeated.

"You love him yourself," said Nona, pitifully.

Audrey stepped backward, till she stood beside Morton. Then she pose I can't spank you, but I've a notion to."

The tension had snapped and Audrey gave a short, nervous giggle. As answer to Morton she threw her arms quickly around his neck and printed a kiss on his cheek.

"You'll marry me some day, though," she said.

Morton called his car and told Audrey to come with him while he took Nona home. Nona sank listlessly back into her chair and watched Audrey with dull eyes as the girl moved briskly around the room.

"You've missed your breakfast," Audrey said to Morton, "but it serves you right."

A faint trace of a smile showed on Nona's face. "I haven't had mine leaped sideways and put her arm around his neck. "Of course I love him," she cried.

"Audrey!" The voice was filled with harsh command. "Nona, stand up! I want this nonsense stopped."

"As a daughter," interjected Morton, dryly.

Audrey threw her free arm into the air as if in triumph. Her voice thrilled as she continued:

"Not as a daughter! As a woman! I love him!"

Morton leaped from the table and whirled to face the girl.

"Audrey! Audrey! You don't know what you are saying, child!"

"I do know!" She almost sang it. "You are the only man there is in the world. Maybe this woman loves you, but she'll never love you a thousandth part as much as I do."

"Daddy! Sweetheart! I want to stop being your daughter. I'm not really your daughter and never can be."

She whirled toward Nona. "If he loves me enough I'll marry him to day."

Nona turned her eyes helplessly toward Morton. It was the look that lies in the eyes of the dying.

Morton placed his hands together before him, palms outward, and then swept them apart, as a man opens a pair of heavy curtains.

"Audrey! The voice was filled with harsh command. "Nona, stand up! I want this nonsense stopped."

Nona moved feebly and lifted her self to her feet. Morton caught her by the arm as she tottered.

"If it is any comfort to you Nona," he added, his voice not quite so rasping. "If I tell you that Audrey is NOT going to marry me today."

"Audrey—" his face was fast regaining its accustomed composure—"if you were ten years younger I'd know exactly what to do with you. I supposed she told him.

Morton reflected. "I'd ask you to breakfast here," he said, "but I don't think your hostess would be a very genial one. I think Paillard's is open for breakfast—I'll take you both there."

He looked at Audrey to see if there was any sign of protest. But for some reason the girl's spirits were high and she nodded gay assent.

"Whether thou goest, I shall go," she quoted. "Thy people shall be my people."

"Then don't pull their hair when they come to see me," he advised. His tone was light but there was a hint of warning in it.

Nona hesitated over the invitation but obeyed a quick shake of his head and was silent. She fell behind as Audrey took his arm going out the door. He stopped, and with a deliberate gesture, invited her to take his arm on the other side. She did so with a little wondering look up into his face.

Audrey nestled closer to him by way of reassurance. Nona observed the motion and a quick twinge of pain showed in her face. Morton leaped forward and turned his head so he could better observe her face.

Openly, so Audrey could see him, he took Nona's hand in his and transferred it to his lap. He possessed himself of Audrey's hand on the other side, and sitting thus, rode all the way to the restaurant. The girls caught his intent and neither of them made any further movement until he helped them from the car.

It was not a jolly breakfast that they ate together. Nona replied wearily to Morton's conversation, keeping her eyes upon her plate for she seemed to have with troubled, heavy eyes and slowly closed the door.

"Under ordinary circumstances I would not have permitted you to go to that apartment for any reason whatever," Morton said to Audrey as they drove away.

"Is she a bad woman?" Audrey asked.

Morton shook his head. "No, of course she's not a bad woman. It is only those who hurt others intentionally, because of malice, who are bad. Nona never plotted any evil against anybody in her life. He stopped and laughed. "Except against me," he added.

The girl spoke eagerly. "I knew she was bad," she said.

"Wrong," Morton said. "She did something to me that she ought not to have done, but she came this morning to tell me that she was sorry—that she did it because—well, because she loved me, she said."

Audrey shook her head slowly. "I don't see how she could have done that—unless she was jealous." Morton laughed silently. "I see you have grown up, my dear," he said.

There was no talk between them about her declaration of love, and he left her at his apartment, going on down to his New York office.

A clerk came to him, when a half hour later, he was settling himself at his desk.

"Young man been waiting for you all morning, sir," he said. "Says it is very important."

JUSTIFICATION FOR RISKS IN ARCTIC TRIPS THIS YEAR

Scientists Think Land Will be Found North of Alaska

New York, April 5.—(AP)—Justification for the risk of life and expenditure of money involved in three American Arctic expeditions this summer was given today by Robert Anderson Pope, organizer of the All-American Alumni Arctic Expedition.

The outfit will be commanded by Lieutenant Leigh Wade, assisted by H. H. Ogden, both of whom are round-the-world fliers.

All three American expeditions will attempt to locate, chart and claim for the United States a large body of land believed to lie north of Alaska and Eastern Siberia, spoken of by the explorers as "a new polar continent." A bulletin issued last year by the National Geographic Society estimated that this land comprises about 1,600,000 square miles.

"Sufficient evidence is available," said Mr. Pope, "to justify the almost certain belief that such land exists." He then proceeded to unfold the evidence.

Convinced of Land

Native of the northern Alaskan and Siberian coasts have been convinced that land lay to the northward ever since Arctic explorers first began to inquire. They base their belief chiefly upon the northerly flight of birds in the spring as soon as the ice starts to go out, which is just before nesting season.

Some scientific skeptics think the birds fly clear across the Pole to Spitzbergen and Franz Joseph Land, but the majority think they would not be likely to attempt such a long flight at the beginning of the nesting season.

E. W. Nelson, chief of the Bureau of Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture has written Mr. Pope:

"My information concerning the flight of birds at Point Barrow, gained both during my residence in Alaska years ago and what has been learned since, all combine to indicate the probability of unknown lands to the north or northeast of that point. Also my observations on Wrangell Island indicate the probability of lands lying northerly from that island."

Found Geese Tracks

Mr. Nelson recalled the evidence of Captain Hooker of the Corwin in 1881, who found innumerable fresh tracks of wild geese on Wrangell Island but not a sign of the geese themselves, indicating a temporary stopping place for a great number of migratory birds. Mr. Murdoch, the naturalist of the Hay Expedition, located near Point Barrow in the same year and the following two years, noted the flight northward of large flocks, Mr. Nelson stated.

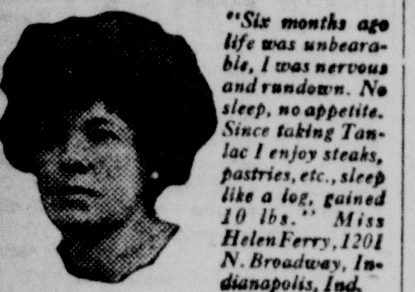

Donald Codzow, of the Museum of the American Indian, also noted geese and ducks flying northward from Alaska. Mr. Pope cited still other naturalists and explorers.

Captain Edward P. Hevelsen, years ago reported that the natives wintering between Harrison and Camden Bays, Alaska, claimed that in the clear days of spring they often could discern land to the northward, but this is thought to have been merely a large island.

Nature's own body builder

"Six months ago life was unbearable. I was nervous and restless. No sleep, no appetite. Since taking Tanlac I enjoy steaks, pastries, etc., sleep like a log, gained 10 lbs." Miss Helen Ferry, 1201 W. Broadway, Indianapolis, Ind.

Tanlac is Nature's greatest tonic and builder. Made from roots, barks and herbs after the Tanlac formula, it revitalizes the blood, tones up the digestive organs and puts the whole system in fighting trim.

Don't go about your work sickly and discouraged. Take the example of millions who have been helped by Tanlac. Stop at your druggist's today and get this wonderful tonic. You'll be surprised how quickly you improve. For constipation take Tanlac Vegetable Pills.

CAN'T BEAT "TIZ" WHEN FEET HURT

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, aching, burning, corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a "Tiz" bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "Tiz" bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead—all tired out—just try "Tiz." It's grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.

There's nothing like "Tiz." It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous excretions which puff up your feet and cause foot torture. A few cents buy a box of "Tiz" at any drug or department store—don't wait. Ah! how glad your feet get; how comfortable your shoes feel.

ABE MARTIN

Minsky Newcomb died today after trying everything but golf in Florida. Some folks think it's gitting publicity when their only excitin' comment.

At the same time, he believed the undiminished tide at Bennett Island indicates a fairly narrow channel along which Nansen traveled.

"These circumstances, so far as they go," said Mr. Harris, "tend to show that the Beaufort Sea is nearly landlocked in all directions excepting toward the west."

Mr. Harris cited the Accounts and Papers of the Navy, page 162, volume 42, 1854, which describes how the tides are affected by the wind at Elson's Bay, east of Point Barrow. When the wind was from the east or northeast there was scarcely any rise in tide, but with the wind blowing a gale from the southwest the tide sometimes rose three and a half feet.

Mr. Harris drew was that the unknown coastline was not greatly distant from the north coast of Alaska, making a pocket in which the tides pile up.

Driftwood carried by ice currents also gave evidence, little driftwood being found as far east of the mouth of the Mackenzie River as Coronation Gulf. Virtually none had been found along Banks Island.

That the Beaufort sea is an ice trap is indicated by the observations of several explorers. Osborn described it as follows:

"Ice of stupendous thickness and in extensive floes, some seven or eight miles in extent, was seen. The surface of it was not flat, such as we see in Baffin Strait and the adjacent seas, but rugged with accumulated snow, frost and thaws of centuries."

Important evidence also was furnished by the drifting of the ill-fated Jeanette, sunk in 1880 after it had been deserted by Captain DeLong, who with his crew froze to death.

The Jeanette became lodged in the ice at a point northeast of Wrangell Island and drifted westerly, going to pieces northwest of Bennett Island.

The Fram, Nansen's ship, became icebound northwest of Bennett Island and drifted in a general course toward the Greenland Sea, showing a sharp turn in the ocean current northwest of Bennett Island. Mr. Harris believed this indicates the point of a large body of land extending down to a point not far from Bennett Island, deflecting the ocean current southward.

He also claimed that the unknown land cannot extend much beyond the pole, or it would have deflected the current in which the Fram drifted.

At the same time, he believed the undiminished tide at Bennett Island indicates a fairly narrow channel along which Nansen traveled.

"The division of ocean currents in the eastern section of the Beaufort sea, one current flowing northeastward and the other westward also indicated a large obstruction to the north in Mr. Harris' opinion."

Mr. Pope, and others supporting his expedition, feel that in these reasons they have sufficient evidence of a polar continent to justify their exploration.

The Store of Real Bargains

Gasoline and Flour

Rising prices are a matter of vital concern to every man, woman and child in the Middle West.

Statistics show that while gasoline has increased in price during the last twelve years it has not advanced nearly as much as other staple commodities.

Take flour for instance. The United States Department of Labor states in the Monthly Labor Review that the average retail price of flour in Chicago on Nov. 15, 1913, was $.029 per pound—$.725 for 25 pounds.

On the same day the average Chicago tank wagon price of Standard Oil Company (Indiana) gasoline was $.145 per gallon. At that price, a twenty-five pound bag of flour would have purchased 5 gallons of gasoline.

On Nov. 15, 1925, the average retail price of flour in Chicago was $.054 per pound—$1.35 for 25 pounds.

The price of Standard Oil Company (Indiana) gasoline on the same day was $.16 per gallon. At that price, a 25 pound bag of flour would have purchased 8.43 gallons of gasoline.

From these figures we find that 25 pounds of flour in 1925 would have purchased 68% more gasoline than in 1913.

In twelve years time, flour advanced in price 86.2% while gasoline advanced only 10.3%.

These statistics are the more startling when the enormous increase in the cost of every factor entering into the making of gasoline is considered.

Why has Standard Oil Company (Indiana) gasoline advanced in price so much less than such staple commodities as flour? How can the continued low price of gasoline be explained?

The answer lies in the unwavering determination of a highly specialized organization of 28,059 men and women to keep costs down that the price of gasoline might be low.

This determination finds expression in the intensive work done in the research laboratories of this Company, and in the close cooperation of every department of the business.

Inspired by this determination to serve, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has developed advanced refining processes which double the yield of gasoline from every barrel of crude. In this way the Company has met increasing costs with increased efficiency.

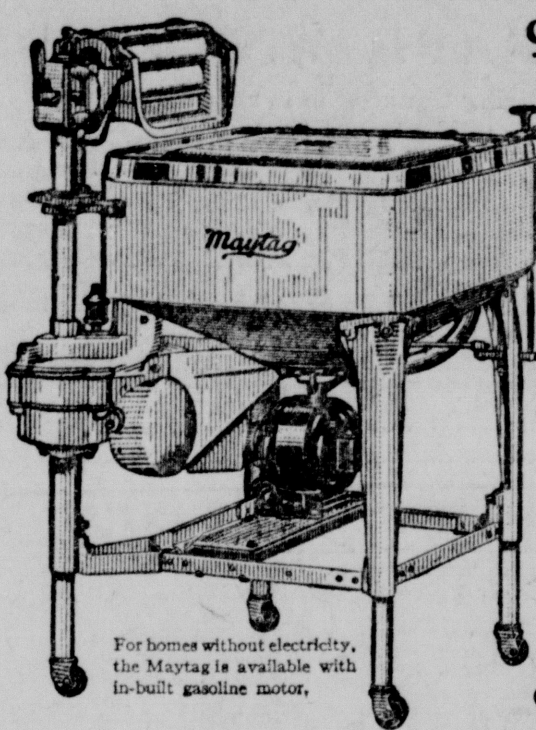

The remarkable achievement of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) in maintaining low gasoline prices in the face of increasing material costs is due to the strenuous, persistent and unending work of its whole organization.
